EXPERIENCE

Steve is an experienced investigation professional with a highly developed skill set specializing in the areas of commercial and general private investigations and covert surveillance. He has been responsible for a large number of successful operations.

Steve joined the Metropolitan Police Service in 2000 as a Police Constable. He worked for 'the Met' for five and a half years leaving them as a Police Sergeant. During his time with the Met Steve has completed a wide range of training courses and has gained many skills and attributes relevant to a corporate investigator.

In his final year with the Metropolitan Police Service he was promoted to Sergeant and tasked to set up a new proactive team for North Wembley. Steve was supervising a team of up to 15 PCs. This involved considerable planning and management. Steve was accountable for the success of the team. Within four months of the team being set up they were heading the arrest figures for the size of the team in the borough and had received commendations for outstanding work.

Since arriving in New Zealand, Steve has worked with Paragon initially as an investigator, rising through the ranks to become a Supervising Specialist Investigator and the lead with one of our government contracts. In that time, just under 10 years with Paragon, Steve has been involved in nearly all our high profile cases and has worked alongside our Managing Director and General Manager forming a trio of experienced investigators well able to tackle any investigative problem.

Steve is a reliable person with exceptional time management skills and integrity. Steve has very good communication and interpersonal skills through dealing with a wide range of problems in a very diverse community.
